

Abstract of the Disclosure

A debugging tool for computer program development that analyzes the computer program adds output statements at strategic locations throughout the program. The 5 output statements may include the filename and line number of the original source code and may further include a listing of the executed command as well as values of certain expressions and/or variables as defined by the requested verbosity. The verbosity may be set at different levels throughout the source code as required.